Dear John and Construction Results,

I just wanted to thank you again for making such a tight timeline and completing the Freewheel Bike shop project as promised within the parameters we set. I come to you for bids because I know the capabilities of both you and your staff and know I can expect great outcomes, as well as an honest quote that takes into consideration our clients budget. While there are other contractors available, I know that with working through Construction Results I will be a priority from the minute I call and you will scope the project/ location right away.

I took this into consideration when I called John about a local bike shop in Minneapolis called Freewheel. Traditionally when I had called John it was for a project at a Macy's location, where I had worked until our corporate office shut down. I was concerned that the Freewheel Redesign project might be too small for for CR, but put out the call anyway. John, as usual, called me back right away and we set up a time to walk the space. I told him about our budget limitations right away and he was still excited and proactive about the job. He was also up front about the costs involved, which can sometimes not be the case with a construction project. They started right away, were able to accommodate a business that was still operational during construction, and met the expectations for the project. We finished the project on time and the remodeled shop was available that weekend for a viewing 50+ people in the bicycle industry. It was a great success and the staff and visitors were very impressed.

Overall this is just one more experience with John and Construction Results that has really helped to maintain that long- term relationship that is so hard to find these days. John understands retail and how quick we need to turn projects, he and his team understand that we expect a lot of bang for our buck, and he knows how to provide something that we are all proud of. I look forward to working with him on numerous projects in the future and will keep recommending him as a great partner in any design project.

Sincerely,

Sarah Schleisman
